South Arkansas to Demand Its Share of New Highways

Mitchell Says Money to Be Available After Special Session

HINT COURT ACTION

"We Were Promised Parity But We Didn't Get It," Speaker Says

CAMDEN, Ark.—Deploring the lack of hard-surfaced highways in South Arkansas, 25 delegates from several counties south of the Arkansas river met here Wednesday, made plans and drafted resolutions to be presented at the general membership meeting of the South Arkansas Highway Association at Warren, March 23.

President L. L. Mitchell of Prescott said an aggressive campaign for new highways is planned. In his keynote address he threatened an injunction suit to halt the highway program if this section were not given new construction. Mitchell also spoke at the luncheon of the Camden Lions Club, at which delegates were guests.

"This half of the state has been discriminated against in the matter of paving highways," President Mitchell said. "We are minus many roads that we are entitled to under the Martin highway law of 1927. We paid for them and they belong to us."

Mitchell reviewed briefly the old Harrison road law and the $86,000,000 bonded indebtedness assumed by the state for the districts under the Martin highway law.

"We were promised parity of highway construction under that act," he said. "We did not get it then and we have not received it since. We have spent $15,000,000 and we didn't get our share. Most of the South Arkansas counties did not have any bonded indebtedness either. We are millions and millions of dollars short in road construction."

Mitchell said that $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 would be available for new highway construction if the special session which meets Thursday adopts Governor Bailey's program.

"We must get our share of this," he added. "It is rightfully ours and we are not asking for anything that we are not entitled to. If we don't, then we are ready to go into federal court and halt the entire program."

Other Speakers

Other speakers were Charles L. Leighton of DeQueen, L. A. Wilson, secretary of the El Dorado Chamber of Commerce; W. M. Graham, secretary of the Warren Chamber of Commerce; E. M. Shaw of Little Rock and W. C. McClure, secretary of the Camden Chamber of Commerce. S. D. Cardhead of Prescott is secretary of the association.

O'Connell Kidnaped Hangs Self in Jail

BOSTON, Mass.—(AP)—A house fashioned from bedsheets Wednesday gave George Romano, 32, his escape from a lifetime behind bars and added a third jail cell suicide aftermath to the kidnapping of John J. O'Connell Jr., at Albany, N. Y., five years ago. Massachusetts state prison guards found Romano's body hanging from a cross bar of a cell, where he was serving a sentence totaling 109 years. He had been sentenced to 77 years for implication in the O'Connell kidnapping and to long terms for armed robbery here and in Cambridge.

CRANIUM CRACKERS

(Up this series of Cranium Crackers with a courtroom query, unusual legal statutes may alter slightly the legal decisions given.)

Cushing entered a drugstore and lunch room operated by Rodman and ordered a cup of coffee and a roll. The food was served and paid for. Unfortunately the roll contained a pebble upon which Cushing broke a tooth and thereby suffered pain, disfigurement and dental expenses.

There were no pebbles in Rodman's place of business, and the pebble could not have gotten into the roll there. The roll was like any other in appearance. The pebble was not visible from the outside and could not have been seen by Rodman or his employees in the ordinary course of serving.

There was no negligence on the part of Rodman. He had purchased the roll, along with other rolls, from another person.

Cushing brought suit against Rodman. The lower court held that there was no legal basis for permitting Cushing to recover from Rodman.

Was the decision correct?

Roosevelt Sends Congress Bill for Conservation Resources

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Secretary Ickes made public a letter hurrayday in which he charged Wendell L. Wilkie, president of the Commonwealth and Southern, with asking the public works administration to "conspire" with him to hold up the $150,000,000 PWA-Municipal power project in the Tennessee Valley.

Ickes letter, addressed to Mayor Watkins Overton of Memphis, Tenn., was in reply to a telegram from the mayor asking whether the PWA would recommend a delay in the construction of electric distribution systems.

A total of $2,111,091,000 on federal and non-federal projects were recommended by the National Resources committee Thursday in a report sent to congress by President Roosevelt.

The president, in his letter of transmittal, described the report as a "comprehensive national plan for conservation and development of our water resources."

The report proposed a six-year construction and investigation program for utilization and conservation of the nation's water resources, a unified policy of water control and development.

Joint Session of Assembly Packed to Hear Governor

Bailey Given "Big Hand" at Conclusion of His Address

TAKE UP BUSINESS

Highway Legislation Is First Matter of Solons

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The extraordinary session of the Arkansas legislature convened a few minutes past noon Thursday and immediately arranged for a joint session of the house and senate to hear Governor Bailey's message.

The house galleries were packed. The senate, led by Lieutenant Governor Bob Bailey, entered the house chamber for a joint session at 12:22 p. m.

The governor entered the chamber shortly afterwards and was greeted by a loud applause.

He started speaking at about 12:30 p. m., 15 minutes later than the original schedule called for. The governor completed his speech at 12:45 p. m., and was given a big hand at the conclusion.

Lieutenant Governor Bob Bailey then adjourned the joint session and the two houses resumed individual session.

Most of the house gallery crowd left immediately after the governor completed his message.

Highway Construction First Of paramount importance among legislative items listed in the special session call are proposals for the enactment of legislation revising the state highway debt program and freeing toll bridges to enable the state to obtain funds for putting into immediate effect a highway construction program.

Anxiety over the possibility that legislation might be enacted which would violate the 1934 refunding act was met by a statement from Governor Bailey that proposals included in his call would not violate terms of Refunding Act 11.

"We have given careful consideration to the shaping of this legislation so it will not be a violation of any of the terms of the refunding act of 1934," he asserted. "That is my opinion and the opinion of competent lawyers who have studied the question."

A resolution adopted by Group Two of the Arkansas Bankers Association at Conway Tuesday called upon the legislature to pass no legislation which would "in any way violate either the spirit or the letter" of the refunding act.

Civil Service Safe Retention of the state civil service law in its present form appeared almost certain from reports of conferences held by members of the legislature at the Hotel Marion.

Practically all members had arrived late Wednesday afternoon and as fast as they arrived, they joined conferences already under way in the hotel lobby or in rooms.

Chief subject of discussion was a rumored movement for repeal or modification of the state civil service act, mention of which was not included in the governor's call. As far as could be ascertained, many members of the legislature appeared opposed to any action on the law at this session.

Text of Governor's Message to Special Session of Legislature

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The text of Gov. Carl E. Bailey's message to the special session of the legislature convened at noon Thursday follows in full: "Proper respect for you and the people dictates that I refer briefly to departments, agencies, and institutions as administered under legislation and appropriations made by the regular session last year.

Your penal system is on a cash basis. During the four years preceding 1937, there had been on capital expenditures made at this institution. The present administration has erected and repaired buildings and roads, purchased large numbers of mules and other livestock, made a highly successful crop last season, has cash, food, feedstuffs, and clothing on hand ample for another year's successful operation.

You reorganized the Public Welfare Department which has functioned efficiently. The department is giving service and relief to almost twice as many individuals as heretofore, and is slightly less in total than the expense incurred by that department heretofore. The expense is, of course, enormously less per unit. The department is cooperating fully with the State Security Board in Washington. All of those whom you intended should be given service or relief—that is, the indigent aged, and the indigent sick—are being provided for in the manner you directed.

Praises Revenue Department The Revenue Department collected approximately $5,000,000 more last year than has been its responsibility for collecting heretofore. The total appropriations for the department are less than they were before, and the percentage cost of collecting is substantially less than at any other time in the history of the department.

The state hospital has been operated economically. The new plant at Benton which was built at huge expense to the taxpayers is being fully utilized. Its facilities are now being enlarged.

The tempo of the present administration with reference to this institution is care plus treatment, rather than merely incarceration, as has been the policy heretofore. Modern methods of treating certain classes of mental disease have been inaugurated. Experience to date justifies a feeling that many for whom there was no hope may be restored to mental good health.

In addition to the medical treatments, occupational therapy is provided. "Through the efforts of your state police department, fatalities on the highway have been reduced. This department has cooperated constantly with local officers in handling traffic and crime. Through the state police radio broadcasting system, it is now possible for the peace officers of the state to work almost as a unit in apprehending criminals and combating crime. The department has lived within its appropriation.

The Training School for Girls and the Industrial School for white boys have had a year of successful operation. The state Health Department has carried out an effective program of disease and epidemic prevention in cooperation with federal agencies.

Banking Department The Banking Department and other supervisory and examining agencies have operated at less expense than has been customary heretofore and have

Part Cotton Bill Said Be Invalid

Loan Plan Declared by Comptroller to Be Inoperative

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—R. N. Elliott, acting comptroller general, declared inoperative Wednesday a provision of the act directing immediate payment of about $10 million to growers who surrendered title to loan cotton to the government.

In an opinion requested by the Agriculture Department, he said congress had not provided funds for such payments. He added that the expenditure could not be made out of the $130,000,000 fund appropriated last fall for "price-adjustment" payments.

The AAA announced that it would proceed with arrangements made last fall for payment of the "price-adjustment" subsidy at a tentative maximum rate of three cents a pound on 65 per cent of each grower's base cotton production. The payments will be made to 1937 growers who comply with the 1938 cotton program, that is, those who plant no more than their acreage allotments under the soil conservation phase of the farm program.

AMARILLO, Texas.—(AP)—The high cattle country paid a glorious tribute to mothers-in-law Wednesday in a regional all-day celebration dedicated to the innocent victim of a thousand and one poor jokes.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was guest of honor and the center of the high plains, greatest spectacle in years. Five states joined in staging a 12-mile-long parade which Mrs. Roosevelt reviewed after she was presented the world's largest bouquet, 5000 matched roses which, with their framework and irrigation system, weighed a ton. Five Southwest governors attended.

Addressing Gene Howe, Amarillo newspaper publisher who originated mother-in-law day five years ago, Mrs. Roosevelt said, "I am so happy to be honored in this manner. I am afraid I haven't been a very good mother-in-law because I have never thought a great deal about it."

"My relations with relatives have been somewhat on a friendship basis, but I feel I shall think more about mothers-in-law after this."

Howe's mother-in-law, Mrs. Nellie Donald, whose objections to a joke he wrote in his column led to inauguration of mother-in-law day five years ago, said, "this is the happiest day in my life."

The celebration attracted by far the largest crowd—an estimated 125,000 persons—ever to assemble in Amarillo.

Alton Camp Here Is Included Among 291 Listed to Be Cut Off

TO MAKE PROTEST

Hope Chamber of Commerce to Take Up Matter Friday

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Robert Fecner, CCC director, ordered Thursday a 291-camp reduction by July 1 to make the program fit the 1938-39 budgetary restrictions.

Fecner said that enlisted personnel would be shifted to other camps. Camps designated by the nearest postoffice which will be permanently shutdown include Hope, Ark.

Camp Not Informed Lieutenant Oliver Harvey, commanding officer of the Alton CCC camp six miles south of Hope, said Thursday that he knew nothing of plans to close the camp.

"It's all news to me," Harvey replied when the Associated Press dispatch from Washington was read to him over telephone.

To Protest Removal Mayor Albert Graves, informed of the intended camp shutdown, said he would take the matter up with the Hope Chamber of Commerce at its meeting Friday in protest of the removal of the camp.

"Every effort will be made to retain the Alton CCC camp. The camp is located in the heart of this soil conservation area—and I think it would be a big mistake to remove it," the mayor said.

The Chamber of Commerce meets Friday and I will take the matter up at the meeting. We will make a determined effort to hold the camp and will solicit aid from our representatives in Washington, D. C., Mayor Graves said.

The Alton camp was established in August of 1935. At present it houses 150 recruits, many of whom are Hempstead county boys. The enlisted personnel includes three officers.

Plan Court Attack on Auto Test Law

Injunction to Halt Testing at El Dorado Announced by Attorneys

EL DORADO, Ark.—(AP)—Attorneys Claude E. Love and Floyd Stein of El Dorado, announced Wednesday night they would file suit in Chancery Court this week to test the compulsory automobile testing law of 1937.

They said they would ask Chancellor George M. LeCroy for an injunction to halt testing of cars at the city-operated station here.

They contended that the law was not a safety measure but was for revenue only. Declaring it unconstitutional, they protested the exemption of cars owned by the city, state and government.

Love and Stein said they had a petition signed by 300 Union county residents asking them to institute the court fight.

Mayor George R. Crossley said the city would file an answer to any suit filed. He said he had been assured that the attorney general's office would aid the city.

The automobile testing requirement was made in sections of the Moore uniform traffic act. Recently several legislators publicly have asked repeal of the sections. State Senator Clyde T. Ellis of Dantonville, asked Governor Bailey to include the proposal in his special session call. It was not listed.

Mitchell said that $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 would be available for new highway construction if the special session which meets Thursday adopts Governor Bailey's program.

"We must get our share of this," he added. "It is rightfully ours and we are not asking for anything that we are not entitled to. If we don't, then we are ready to go into federal court and halt the entire program."

When Derek's note came that morning, Constance stood for a moment, holding it unopened in caressing fingers, her eyes on the bleak, frozen desolation of the little park across the street.

She had always loved the little park. Having it there, framed by her front windows, lent an illusion of spaciousness to her cozy chintz-hung apartment.

Only last night she and Derek had eaten supper at the table by the windows. There has been a golden soufflé, asparagus, a salad, hot biscuit with money, some of the cheese Derek liked so much, and a very special bottle of wine. And there had been yellow roses on the table and yellow candles in the silver candlesticks her fellow workers at the Art Museum had sent her for a wedding present.

The candlesticks had come while she was setting the table; and Derek had insisted on using them at once. "After all," he had said, "why wait two whole days? . . . We'll be married, anyhow."

Before supper Constance had shown him some of the new clothes she had bought—the smoke-blue satin dinner dress just the shade of her eyes; the velvet that wasn't brown or rust or burnt orange, but had a touch of all three—"I must paint you in that," Derek had said. Then there were the white knitted suit with the variegated scarf; the bouffant gray coat with the swirl of fur about the hem, and the saucy red hat with a bag to match. . . . And, of course, the gay posy-garden smocks—"To wear when I'm cleaning your brushes for you, darling."

Rocking Sick Baby May Please Mother, But It's Certainly Not Best for Child

(No. 470)
Of all the specialties in the practice of medicine, one of the most difficult is that concerned with the care of the infant, principally because the doctor who is called in has to rely on what the mother or the nurse tells him about the child's condition during the period before it became seriously ill.

The sick baby should be placed in bed and not be held or rocked. Rocking may please the mother but does not do much for the baby. A baby who is beginning to be ill is likely to be nervous, irritable, fussy and inclined to cry on the slightest provocation.

That type of baby particularly should be put in a room and not be subjected to the ill-advised and cumbersome ministrations of solicitous relatives.

Particularly should the baby be kept away from other children.

When the doctor examines a sick baby he is likely to ask certain questions about some of its functions. It should be well if mothers could realize this fact and keep at least part of their on these matters most of the time. For instance, is the baby having more or less actions of the bowel than usual? Is the material passed by way of the bowel fluid, solid or semi-solid? Is it unusual in color or in odor?

Next, does the fluid which passes from the baby by way of the bladder come at the usual intervals? Is it more or less in amount? If possible a specimen of this fluid should be saved for the doctor just as soon as it is known that he is going to be called.

The doctor will also want to know what the baby has been fed in the previous 48 hours; how much water it has had; whether or not it has been sleeping restfully; crying, vomiting or indulging in other extraordinary manifestations. He will want to know if the baby looks as well as usual.

It is all right for the mother if she has a thermometer and knows how to take a temperature to make a record of the infant's temperature, taking it by way of the rectum rather than under the arm or by way of the mouth.

outraged heart-beat, however, she said in a voice which she managed to keep level and quietly amused:

"Perhaps because no one who knows me well enough would be guilty of such an impertinence." "My dear girl," he said shortly, "don't talk nonsense. It's no impertinence to hate seeing beauty outraged."

He moved abruptly away; but half way to the door he turned to call softly over his shoulder with one of his sudden flashing smiles, "And I'm not talking about the scarf, either."

Constance spent her idle moments that morning devising silky, icy, devastating phrases with which to slay him if he dared to come back. But when she looked up from her work that afternoon to find him smiling down at her, she smiled back in spite of herself. His hands were hidden behind him.

"Which one will you take?" he challenged her.

Constance said—again in spite of herself—"The right!"

"Right it is!" he cried, and held before her a shimmering scarf of a deep vibrant blue. "Trade?"

When he saw her startled face, he cried swiftly, his eyes holding hers with boyish pleading, "Please! It isn't every day you can make a canvas perfect with one touch of the brush."

"I'll wear it," Constance said wickily, "if you'll wear the green one."

With a shrug he removed his tie, and when she handed him the green scarf, he put it about his neck and knotted it into a rakish bow. As she fastened the blue scarf at her throat, he watched her with dreamy satisfaction.

"I shall paint you," he declared, "in exactly that shade of blue."

And he did paint her so—poised against a shadowy background like a vibrant blue flame, with blue shadows in the raven of her hair. He called the portrait simply Lady in Blue. It was the picture that had won him first place at the International this year.

During the months since that first meeting Constance had found that Derek was not always a gay, irresponsible boy, any more than he was always arrogant and cocky.

She learned that he had moods of deepest depression, when he doubted himself and disparaged every stroke of his brush. . . . At such times he clung to her for reassurance. At such times she loved him more than she could have believed it possible to love.

. . . She came to know, too, that money meant a great deal to Derek.

She began to realize how much when Ernest Thorvald approached him tentatively about the portrait of his daughter.

Ernest Thorvald was the owner of a California ranch as big, Derek told her, as some European kingdoms, on which he lived like a feudal baron. . . . The pupils of Derek's eyes had been very wide and black as he told Constance about his meeting with "Baron Grapefruit" as he called him.

"If I can land this commission, Connie," he said, "it will give me so much publicity that I'll be able to sell anything I paint." Then his face darkened. "If only the girl hasn't a squint or a harelip."

As the matter hung fire, Derek had grown restless and irritable. Then last evening, just two days before their approaching wedding, he had rushed in excited as a schoolboy, with the news that Mr. Thorvald was coming today to the studio to look at some more of his work. Constance must not mind if she did not hear from him until late in the evening.

Yet this was only morning, and here was a note from Derek. Constance opened the envelope, a tender little smile on her lips.

When she had read it through, she glanced unbelievably at the signature and read it through carefully, painfully again. Then she stood for a long time motionless, staring eye-wide across the bleak little park outside—no more bleak in the thin sunshine than the frozen smile that still lingered palely on her lips.

New Start Will Cure "Fraidy-Cat"

(No. 34)
Jackie starts up the stairs to bed. He is all undressed and has just kissed daddy good-night. You make a move to go with him, but daddy says, "Let him go alone. He knows the way and you are tired. Can't he pull up the covers himself?"

You decide to try it, just to see what happens. So you agree, and go out to the hall with him. A light is burning by the stairs to show him the way. He gets to the top while you watch, and then suddenly he turns and comes hurrying down. "It's all dark up there," he says. "I'm afraid."

It isn't very dark, but Jackie has to pass a shadowed corner as well as two dark bedrooms with open doors. It is the first time that Jackie has failed you in his life. You never dreamed that he was a "fraidy cat."

Both of you are shocked and grieved and explain that there is nothing to hurt him and to try it again.

Explanations Only Confirm

But the more you talk the more Jackie balks. He can't explain that a black battalion of imagination is crowding his heart into his throat, so he begins to chatter about big bad things, making them up as he goes, to explain why he knows he can't explain.

Maybe there is more talk. Kindly enough, but positive. That finishes it. With all this stuff taking shape in his mind that was not there before, now he knows. Negatives mean little to a small child. There is something to be afraid of, he convinces himself.

Silence is golden in all handling of fear. In this case the best way is to change the subject. Take Jackie up as usual and tell him a funny story. Be gay and pretend that you did not notice anything out of the ordinary.

Go up with him, tuck him in, and leave a light in the hall this first night.

Each night close the door just a little more and reduce the light. When he can rest happily with his own door closed, after, say, a week or so, you might try again to see if he will go upstairs alone.

Have lights on in all the bedrooms this time, and both halls. Lower them each night as before. The day will come when all he needs is enough to guide him to his own room.

No doubt you are saying this is long drawn-out experimentation. And so it is. But I give it to show how to wipe out unfortunate impressions.

Most youngsters are afraid of the dark, and they get used to being afraid. But in some cases, it remains to dog them and make life almost unbearable.

The method of going back to beginnings and manufacturing a new courage is wiser than talk, force, or shaming.

England Was Near to a Revolution

England was close to revolution when the World War ended. Not only were her people war-weary, her masses disillusioned and her leaders more or less discredited; her working class was angry, and the unity and the will-power to translate that anger into direct action were available.

But the revolution never took place. Today one of the most conservative governments in modern English history is at the helm. The very real and deep revolutionary crisis of the post-war years has vanished, almost without a trace.

To understand why and how this happened, you might profitably study "The Post-War History of the British Working Class," by Allen Hutt (Coward-McCann: $2.75).

What prevented a real revolutionary movement, as Mr. Hutt sees it, was simply the fact that a militant, activity class-conscious labor movement happened, you might profitably study "The Post-War History of the British Working Class," by Allen Hutt (Coward-McCann: $2.75).

The Roosters have entered six tournaments this season, including the county and district, out of those six they have won first place in two, and second place in another. In most of the games lost, Rosston was handicapped by the loss of their six-foot and five-inch center, Lee Jarvis, or their steady guards Hoover and Sorrells.

Coach E. May looks forward to a good season next year. He hopes to have back from this year's team: Forbes, Hoover, Sorrells, N. Jarvis, Bailey, Atkins, Phillips and others who have been out this year. He loses his center Lee Jarvis and forward Her-Willisville Lions, only time this man Waters.

The regular monthly meeting of the John Cain chapter, D. A. R. was held with a 1 o'clock luncheon on Wednesday at Hotel Barlow, with Mrs. J. M. Houston, Mrs. R. E. Cain, Mrs. Dan Green and Miss Mary Jones as hostesses. The large round table in the private dining room, was laid with handsome damask, and beautifully appointed. Decorations were a central green bowl of yellow flowers, daffodils predominating, flanked by green candelabra in crystal holders. The meeting opened with the regent, Mrs. Chas. Locke, leading in the salute to the flag, the American creed and the opening ritual. The president general's message was read by Mrs. Wilbur Jones. Mrs. Jones announced that papers for one new member had been approved, and papers for two more members were being approved. A letter was read from Mrs. Sloan, state regent, in regard to the state conference in Pine Bluff next week. Mrs. Lee A. Holt was elected delegate to this conference. The chapter voted $1 at a gift to Miss Anne Semmes Barbers of Osceola, who is the good citizenship pilgrim from Arkansas this year. Mrs. R. F. McFadden, national defense chairman of the local chapter, presented the program on National Defense. Typed slips dealing with historical phases of the American creed were given to each member as an introduction to the program. Mrs. McFadden gave a most instructive and interesting address on National Defense, revealing the fact that she was thoroughly conversant with her subject. A subject that is being discussed as a national question at the present time. The meeting closed with the closing ritual and the singing of "America" with Mrs. Wilbur Jones accompanying. Mrs. R. L. Searey of Lewisville was a guest.

Mrs. R. V. Herndon was a Thursday visitor at the races in Hot Springs.
The Cemetery association will meet Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the First Methodist church.

Circle No. 2 of the W. M. S. First Methodist church held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. John P. Cox, South Elm street, with Mrs. Benjamin and Mrs. McGinnis as associate hostesses. V. Nunn presented a very interesting program on "Christian Social Relations." Mrs. Ralph Rounton reviewed the first chapter of the book "Aldersgate and After." Following the program a short business period was held, after which the hostesses served a tempting salad course with tea to 13 members and one guest.

Text of Governor's

The modern sound amplifying equipment now in use at the school, children are prepared to receive teaching in a matter of months rather than years.

Because of your interest in the welfare of all children, you provided authority and appropriations at the last regular session for the construction of a new, modern, fire-proof school for blind children. Your action in this regard has been branded an improper scheme. Blind children are few in number and they are our responsibility. The children in that school might be mine or yours. The new institution is partially constructed. Whether it is to remain a monument to disregard for the welfare of this group of children is a matter which I now place squarely before you. You can adopt legislation which will result in the completion of this project, or you can let one man's callousness continue to imperil helpless children.

Legislation for Insurance Tax

A recent decision of the United States Supreme Court is of such import that a substantial part of the state's income from tax on insurance premiums will be lost if you do not enact remedial legislation. This is the tax which supports the firemen's pension fund and is the principal support for the General Revenue Fund. The General Revenue Fund, as you know, supports all the constitutional offices. I sincerely hope that you will conclude that it is the part of wisdom and equity to adopt legislation which will prevent this loss. This is not asking for a new tax. It is merely preventing the loss of an established tax.

At the last session, you established the state Board of Barber Examiners. The appropriation which you made failed. Money for organization of the Board was provided out of the Governor's Emergency Fund. The Board has collected enough money to carry on its functions during the remainder of this biennium and to repay the Governor's Emergency Fund. You should adopt legislation to that effect.

Exhibit at World's Fair
You created at the last session a Publicity Commission and Director of Information. One of your announced intentions in creating that agency was

HOW TO SLEEP GOOD

Many things disturb sleep. The most common is bladder irritation caused by excess kidney acids and other waste. Make this 4 day test. Your 25c back if not pleased. Flush the kidneys as you do the bowels. Help nature relieve the irritation that wakes you up. Just say Buick's 25c to any druggist. Locally at Briant's Drug Store and John S. Gibson Drug Co.

to place a commendable state exhibit at the World's Fair in New York in 1939. The appropriation for this agency failed. Money was provided out of the Governor's Emergency Fund for this agency to carry on its functions. As a result of its efforts, in cooperation with other agencies and public-spirited citizens, magnificent state exhibits have been displayed on at least half a dozen occasions in various parts of the United States. On each occasion where the exhibit was displayed in competition with other exhibits, the Arkansas exhibit won first prize. If we are to have an exhibit at the World's Fair, it will be necessary for this General Assembly to provide the means.

The most important legislation for your consideration relates to schools and highways.

Despite the fact that at the last session you did adopt all proposals for the betterment of the common schools, it nevertheless is a fact that unless approximately $175,000 additional funds are provided by you at this session, several thousand rural school children can attend school only seven months this school year. This seems a very modest price to pay for an additional month of school training for the children of our citizens; especially since our financial condition is such that it can be done without levying new taxes.

Free Toll Bridges

All state institutions, agencies, and departments are on a cash basis operating with that degree of efficiency which is possible with the limited or liberal facilities and appropriations available to them. This is true of even the highway department. However, the highway department is without funds for the construction of new roads and is without adequate funds for the maintenance of existing roads. In this situation, the roads and highways of the state are suffering from damage and deterioration which constitutes a hidden expense which the citizens of this state will have to pay in the future unless the condition is corrected at this time. I have provided, therefore, in the call for this session the opportunity for you to remove the tolls from our toll bridges. When this is done, the federal government will repay us one-half the original cost of constructing those bridges which meet its requirements.

I have provided, also, the opportunity in this call for you to increase the in-transit tax. By in-transit tax, you understand we mean the tax which the state charges for towing automobiles across the state on our highways. This is an operation which is in competition with one of our largest tax-payers—our railroads. Our tax is one of the lowest in the Union. These things being done, there will be made available several million dollars of state funds with which:

- To construct and maintain state highways and bridges;
- To construct and maintain farm-to-market roads;

To purchase privately-owned toll bridges on state highways so that they too can be made free bridges;

To assume the indebtedness of bridge districts which build bridges on the state highways; and

To assume the indebtedness of municipal improvement districts which built continuations of state highways through various cities and towns.

In other words, favorable action on the various highway legislation before you will result in more than $20,000,000 benefits to our roads and bridges during the next four or five years, and only six or seven million will be supplied from state funds.

I have convened this Extraordinary Session of the General Assembly fully conscious that it provides two opportunities. On the one hand, the opportunity is now provided for demagoguery to run rampant for a few days. I have been warned—I might say even threatened—that certain entrenched interests, who do not profit at public expense while I occupy the governor's office, will encourage that kind of demagoguery which is willing to crucify the best interests of the state on a cross fashioned for political embarrassment.

Requests Harmonious Session

When you were in session in 1937, you wrote such a program of constructive legislation as has never been written by any other General Assembly in the history of this state. With that in mind, and my personal acquaintance with the individual members of the General Assembly and the knowledge of your individual backgrounds, I have been able fully to discount such dire predictions. I know that you have the intelligence, the integrity, and the energy for a harmonious session which will accomplish a constructive program for the people of this state within the shortest possible time and at the least expense to the taxpayers. I am sure that you are intelligent enough to know, as I am, that to do otherwise will injure you and your state.

Reasons Given for Quitting Football

School Board Explains Why Game Was Dropped at Texarkana

TEXARKANA.—President Ed Berry and four members of the Texarkana College Board of Trustees explained Wednesday night why football had been abolished at the college by a four-to-two vote of the board.

Want to Be Honest

The statement said that football players had contributed nothing toward the support of the college in several years, but are given employment on "made" jobs to pay their tuition. The statement said further:

"To comply with the eligibility requirements of the conference of junior colleges in Texas, the board has had to pay the athletes or make work enough for them to pay their tuition. The money comes back into the college in the form of receipts, but this practice really pads the tuition receipts."

The college has made two moves to legalize direct granting of scholarships to athletes but has not been able to get them approved.

"So the college has to practice a subterfuge in order to give athletes their tuition free."

"It is doubtful that the college is really doing any good for the athletes who are given their tuition through made work jobs. The athletes know that such a work job is a subterfuge, and they do not work with any degree of sincerity."

"Other colleges do the same thing, and there may be no particular call for the local institution to try to be honest, but it is not an honest thing to give athletes tuition free for work which they do not do and which is really not needed."

1937 Deficit $400

The statement said that Texarkana College would show a $400 deficit from the 1937 football season. It reported that of the 20 municipal colleges in Texas only five had athletics in 1937. Eight municipal colleges that once played football have abandoned it, and only two have resumed the game, the statement said.

The board said that it would require between $2,500 to $3,000 to supply board and room for the number of athletes that should be on the team. Gate receipts will not pay this sum, they say.

The board members said that they were "willing at all times to give the citizens of Texarkana and surrounding territory what they want," and if enough money can be raised to play football, they will meet with any group interested and work out a plan to maintain the game.

Signers of Statement

The statement was signed by President Berry and Board Members S. A. Buchanan, C. C. Bounds, A. J. C. Dunham and T. J. Wilbanks.

James Stuart, secretary of the board, who resigned at the meeting, and Dr. William Hibbits, another board member did not sign the statement. They voted to retain football.

NOTICE TO BROKERS

The law requires that brokers of oil leases and royalties must secure a license from the Arkansas Real Estate Commission. Without such license they would have no standing in court in suits to enforce collection of commissions.

The license fees are $10.00 per year for brokers, and $2.00 per year for salesmen employed by brokers. The penalties fixed by law for acting as such broker or salesman without a license are fines of $25.00 to $500.00 or six months imprisonment.

Application blanks may be obtained from the Arkansas Real Estate Commission, 709 Pyramid Building, Little Rock, or from W. A. Reed, Secretary, who will be in the city during the week of March 14.
